Introduction

Older adults make up the fastest-growing segment of Ohio's population. As a result, all of us need to be vigilant in learning the warning signs of elder abuse, neglect and exploitation. We also need to know how to report elder abuse, neglect and exploitation if we suspect an older loved one or neighbor might be a target.

This guide has been developed for that purpose. It includes information about the types of elder abuse and how and why it occurs, as well as information about how to report suspected elder abuse, who is required by law to report it, and contact information for the county offices charged with receiving and investigating reports.

The Ohio Department of Job and Family Services supervises the state's Adult Protective Services program, which helps vulnerable adults age 60 and older who are in danger of harm, are unable to protect themselves and may have no one to assist them. We ask for your help – and the help of all Ohioans – in sharing the information in this guide and encouraging others to do the same. Printed copies can be ordered from the following website:

Thank you for your help in protecting our older friends, relatives and neighbors.

What is Elder Abuse?

Section 1

True or False?

The difference between abuse and neglect is that abuse represents an action and neglect represents a lack of action.

True – Section 5101.60 of the Ohio Revised Code defines abuse as the infliction upon an adult by self or others of injury, unreasonable confinement, intimidation, or cruel punishment with resulting physical harm, pain or mental anguish. Neglect is defined as the failure of an adult to provide for self the goods or services necessary to avoid physical harm, mental anguish or mental illness; failure of a caretaker to provide such goods or services; or abandonment.

Abused adults will usually discuss the abuse in an effort to stop it.

False – The fear of what may happen if they do tell someone can be more frightening than the abuse itself. The older adult may try to hide his or her injuries or downplay what the perpetrator did. The older adult may be more afraid of being removed from the home or being punished by the alleged perpetrator.

You must have evidence of abuse, neglect or exploitation before you report it.

False – Ohio law states that a report must be made if you have reasonable cause to believe that an adult is being abused, neglected or exploited or is in a condition that is the result of abuse, neglect or exploitation. Physical proof or other evidence is not required, as it is not the reporter's responsibility to determine if abuse, neglect or exploitation is occurring or has occurred. The county department of job and family services or its designated agency is legally mandated to make this determination. To assist them with this, you will be asked to provide information concerning the older adult, alleged perpetrator and the abuse, neglect or exploitation. There may be some information, such as the identity of the perpetrator or the exact age of the adult, that you might not know. While providing this information is helpful, it is not necessary when making a report.

If you report abuse, neglect or exploitation and your suspicions are unfounded, you are liable for a civil or criminal suit.

False – Section 5101.63 of the Ohio Revised Code states that any person with reasonable cause to believe that an adult is suffering abuse, neglect or exploitation who makes a report pursuant to this section, or who testifies in any administrative or judicial proceeding arising from such a report, or any employee of the state or any of its subdivisions who is discharging responsibilities under section 5101.65 of the Revised Code shall be immune from civil or criminal liability unless the person has acted in bad faith or with malicious purpose. Although no statute can prevent the filing of civil or criminal charges, Ohio law protects the reporter of suspected adult abuse, neglect or exploitation from any decision or award that might be sought through filing of such a claim.

An anonymous report of abuse, neglect or exploitation will not be investigated.

False – Adult protective services staff are required by law to investigate every report of suspected abuse, neglect and exploitation screened in for investigation. Anonymous reports are allowed; however, they are not encouraged. Those who report are asked to give their names so they can be contacted later if additional information is needed.

Medical, mental health and legal professionals are not legally required to report adult abuse, neglect or exploitation because they are bound by client confidentiality.

False – Section 5101.63 of the Ohio Revised Code states that any individual having reasonable cause to believe that an adult is being abused, neglected or exploited or is in a condition that is the result of abuse, neglect or exploitation shall immediately report such belief to the county department of job and family services. Paragraph A(2) of this section provides a comprehensive list of the individuals who are mandated reporters.

Most older adults are victimized by strangers.

False – Abuse, neglect and exploitation against an older adult are more likely to be carried out by family members or others known to the adult.

The role of Adult Protective Services (APS) is to take older adults out of their homes and place them in a nursing home for their own protection.

False – APS has a duty to respond to reports of older adult abuse, neglect and exploitation; to investigate the allegations; to work with the older adult to address his or her needs; and to prevent further abuse, neglect and exploitation. At the same time, the APS worker also must consider the older adult's right to self-determination. The most difficult challenge APS workers face is finding a balance between the adult's right to self-determination and his or her safety.

Once the abuse, neglect or exploitation is brought to the attention of authorities, those involved will usually admit there is a problem and accept help.

False – Any relationship where there is love, trust or an assumption of trust can be difficult to end. Most of the time, the older adult wants the abuse, neglect or exploitation to stop and also wants to preserve the relationship with the alleged perpetrator. The older adult may behave in a way that protects the abuser, such as not giving accurate information or recanting.

APS is only required to serve adults who are 60 and over.

True – However, a few counties will provide APS services to those under 60 if funds are available. Those counties are Ashtabula, Brown, Champaign, Logan, Madison, Montgomery, Pike, Preble, Shelby and Wood.

Abuse, neglect and exploitation of adults is rare.

False – In state fiscal year 2017, Ohio's county JFS agencies received 16,241 reports of abuse, neglect and exploitation regarding adults age 60 and over. It is believed that only one in 24 incidents of elder abuse is reported.

The identity of the person who reports adult abuse, neglect or exploitation is protected under Ohio law.

True – The written and oral report are confidential and are not public records. However, the CDJFS may release the identity of the referent or any person providing information during the course of an assessment investigation to the following entities: ODJFS staff in the administration of Ohio's APS program; law enforcement when investigating a criminal case; the county prosecutor when information is needed for criminal proceedings; another CDJFS or its designee investigating an adult abuse, neglect or exploitation report involving a principal of the case.

The state of Ohio conducts all investigations of adult abuse, neglect and exploitation.

False – Ohio's protective service systems are state-supervised and county-administered. This means the state plans and develops APS programs, writes rules and regulations, and provides technical assistance to county agencies. The county JFS agencies receive and investigate reports of elder abuse, neglect and exploitation and evaluate the need for protective services.

Only a CDJFS is permitted to conduct APS investigations.

False – The CDJFS is permitted by statute to designate an agency to receive, screen and investigate reports of elder abuse.

Each CDJFS or its designee independently conducts investigations for their county.

True – Each CDJFS or its designee is responsible for the investigations received within their county. However, depending on the allegation, a joint investigation may be completed.

Defining Elder Abuse

Elder abuse is a term used globally to encompass the various forms of maltreatment to which vulnerable adults may be subjected. It includes physical, sexual and psychological abuse, as well as neglect, abandonment and financial exploitation. Elder abuse affects about 5 million Americans each year, causing untold illness, injury and suffering for victims and those who care about and for them (Connolly, Brandl, and Breckman, 2014).

Intentional acts of abuse, neglect or exploitation can be inflicted by a caretaker or any person in the adult's life. Vulnerable adults who are unable to meet their own basic personal and medical needs may also suffer from self-neglect. For the purposes of adult protective services, Ohio law defines an "adult" as a person who meets all of the following criteria:

- Is age 60 or older.
- Is handicapped by the infirmities of aging or has a physical or mental impairment that prevents the person from providing for his or her own care or protection.
- Resides in an independent living arrangement.

An independent living arrangement is "...a domicile of a person's own choosing, including, but not limited to, a private home, apartment, trailer or rooming house." It includes a residential facility that provides accommodations, supervision and personal care services for three to 16 unrelated adults, but does not include institutions or facilities licensed by the state or in which a person resides as a result of voluntary, civil or criminal commitment.

Approximately 65 million people in the U.S. are age 60 or older. All but a small percentage of them live in non-institutional settings, as do nearly 57 million people with disabilities. Both populations are growing, and older Americans are one of the fastest-growing demographics in the country. By 2020, the United States will have more than 77 million people over age 60 (Administration for Community Living, April 2017).

Elder abuse does not affect only adults who are frail, in poor health, living in nursing homes or suffering from mental or physical impairments. Individuals who still provide for their own daily needs and are active in the workforce or community may be victims of elder abuse, as well.

In Ohio, reports of elder abuse involving individuals living in the community are investigated by APS staff from the county departments of job and family services or their designated agencies. Reports of elder abuse involving individuals living in nursing or residential facilities are investigated by the Ohio Department of Health (ODH), the licensing entity for nursing homes. If the perpetrator resides in the community – in other words, is not an employee or resident of the nursing facility – ODH and APS may conduct a joint investigation to ensure the adult's safety and protection.

Some county APS programs investigate reports and provide services for people between the ages of 18 and 59 who live in independent living arrangements and have physical or mental impairments that prevent them from providing their own care or protection.

Types of Elder Abuse

The following are the main types of elder abuse:

- Self-neglect
- Neglect (by others)
- Exploitation
- Emotional Abuse
- Physical Abuse
- Sexual Abuse

Ohio APS staff investigated 16,241 maltreatment reports in state fiscal year 2017. Of those, about 45 percent involved allegations of self-neglect, 23 percent alleged neglect by others, 18 percent alleged exploitation, 8 percent alleged emotional abuse, 6 percent alleged physical abuse, and less than 1 percent alleged sexual abuse.

Self-neglect occurs when an older person cannot or does not provide him or herself with necessary care to avoid injury, anguish or illness. Self-neglect behaviors may include:

- Hoarding objects and/or animals to the extent that the safety of the individual (and/or other household members or community members) is threatened.
- Not obtaining adequate food, nutrition, medicine and/or medical treatment.
- Poor hygiene.
- Not wearing suitable clothing for the weather.
- Residing in an unsafe or unsanitary environment.

Neglect happens when a caretaker refuses or fails to provide a vulnerable adult with the goods and services necessary to prevent physical harm, mental anguish or mental illness. This could include, but is not limited to, food, shelter, health care or protection. When a caretaker deserts a vulnerable adult without making provisions or arrangements for the adult's care, it is abandonment.

Exploitation is when a person uses a vulnerable adult's funds, property or assets for their own benefit without the permission of the adult, beyond the scope of the adult's authorization, by deception, by threat or by intimidation.

Emotional abuse occurs when someone uses threats, humiliation or intimidation to psychologically harm a vulnerable adult. Violating an adult's right to make decisions for him- or herself, isolating the adult from friends and family, or denying the adult his or her right to privacy could also be considered emotionally abusive behaviors.

Physical abuse is when someone uses physical force that causes bodily injury pain or impairment. This could include punching, pushing, slapping, kicking, restraining, cutting, burning or using objects as weapons. Inappropriate administration of drugs, restraint, force feeding and confinement also could be considered physical abuse.

Sexual abuse is nonconsensual sexual contact or activity of any kind with a vulnerable older adult. It includes sexual contact when the person is legally unable to give consent, as well as touching, fondling or other sexual activity that is forced or threatened, regardless of the age of the perpetrator.

Why Elder Abuse Occurs

Early research typically linked the cause of elder abuse to caregiver stress. While being a caregiver is inherently stressful, most caregivers never abuse, neglect or exploit the elder for whom they are caring. Elder abuse is not an isolated event. It is a pattern of behavior that occurs over time and often targets only the elder. Recent research has invalidated the caregiver stress theory and found that many elder abuse cases involve the power and control dynamic more closely related to domestic violence. It is important to remember that power and control can be exerted in any type of relationship and that domestic violence can be perpetrated by people other than spouses and intimate partners.

The following risk factors can increase older adults' chances of becoming victims:

- Low social support
- Low income level or poverty
- Living with a large number of family members
- Poor physical health or physical disability
- Dependency on others for care
- Previous trauma
- Dementia
- Frailty
- Being nonverbal or unable to communicate

The following are known risk factors for perpetrators:

- Psychiatric institutionalization
- Diagnosis of mental illness
- Substance abuse
- Hostile disposition
- Dependence on the victim for housing or finances

Some elder abuse perpetrators are legitimately unable to care for the adult's needs and do not intentionally harm the adult. In those cases, it is wholly appropriate to provide services and supports to assist the perpetrator with meeting the adult's needs and to teach the perpetrator how to provide care without doing further harm, if possible. However, when a power and control dynamic is present, or if domestic violence is occurring, addressing the abuse requires a focus on the behaviors of the abuser, as well as the safety and care needs of the older adult.

For APS professionals, identifying whether a power and control relationship exists is critical to ensuring the adult's safety. Working solely on caregiver stress issues, without holding the abuser accountable for his or her behavior, could ultimately increase the danger to the vulnerable adult.

Perpetrators of Elder Abuse

A perpetrator of elder abuse can be any person. In most cases, the perpetrators are people the adult knows and trusts. Family members are the most common offenders, including adult children, spouses or significant others, grandchildren and other relatives. In 2017, relatives accounted for almost 46 percent of the perpetrators in elder abuse reports in Ohio, and the perpetrator resided with the adult in 38 percent of the reports investigated. For cases of self-neglect, which represent almost half of the reports investigated by APS, there is no perpetrator.

In addition to family members, other individuals who are in positions of trust or authority are also commonly identified as perpetrators. These relationships include guardians, attorneys, clergy, paid caregivers, neighbors, friends and acquaintances (especially “new best friends”). Changes to Ohio law in 2017 expanded the definition of exploitation from a “caretaker” who unlawfully uses the adult’s resources in one or more transactions to include “any person” who engages in exploitative behaviors and actions.

Perpetrators use abusive and assaultive tactics to exert their power. Some are subtle, such as giving the adult “the silent treatment,” while others are more overt, such as displaying weapons or threatening beloved pets. These tactics, or abusive acts, demonstrate a pattern of behavior intended to manipulate and control the adult by making the adult fearful of seeking help. The end goal is to ensure that the abuser maintains access to the adult or the adult’s resources.

Abusers also may isolate the older adult from family or other individuals who would be concerned about him or her. When someone inquires about the adult’s condition or situation, these perpetrators use any number of excuses to justify their actions or explain the harm that has occurred. An abusive caregiver may try to portray him or herself as suffering from caregiver stress as a way to justify the abuse, gain sympathy, or shift blame for the abuse to the adult victim. Some attempt to be charming and helpful; others become belligerent and angry. In some cases, the abuser will eagerly talk about the adult in an attempt to get buy-in for the idea that the abuse was unavoidable, and not the perpetrator’s fault. Below are some examples of the justifications commonly heard from elder abuse perpetrators:

- “She bruises easily” / “He fell” (accident)
- “He didn’t do what I said” / “She doesn’t cooperate” (uncooperative victim)
- “He hit me first” / “She came on to me” (mutual blaming)
- “She is too difficult to care for” / “He is clumsy” (victim blaming)
- “I’m doing the best I can” (caregiver stress)
- “Those were gifts” / “That was a loan” (entitlement)

In families with a history of conflict or a pattern of violent behavior, the increased dependency or care needs of a vulnerable adult can escalate the problems. As the older adult becomes more dependent on his or her family members for assistance with daily activities, the chance of abuse increases.

Abuser Tactics

Abusers use a variety of tactics to exert their power and control over vulnerable adults. The following are examples:

Neglect

- Denying or creating long waits for food, heat, care or medication
- Not reporting medical problems
- Failing to follow medical, therapy or safety recommendations even though the abuser understands them or the need for them
- Refusing to dress the adult or dressing the adult inappropriately
- Denying access to spiritual traditions/events
- Denying access to ceremonial traditions or church
- Ignoring religious traditions

Physical Abuse

- Hitting, slapping, pushing, shaking, kicking, pinching, burning, pulling hair or choking
- Inappropriately using drugs or physical restraints
- Creating hazards, bumping and/or tripping
- Force feeding
- Throwing objects
- Forcing unwanted physical activity
- Physical punishment
- Homicide or homicide/suicide
- Strangulation and suffocation

Emotional Abuse

- Withholding affection
- Engaging in “mind games”; falsely claiming the elder is demented
- Publicly humiliating or behaving in a condescending manner toward the adult
- Humiliating, shaming, demeaning or ridiculing the adult
- Yelling, insulting or calling names
- Degrading, disrespecting or blaming the adult
- Using silence or profanity

Threatening

- Stalking
- Threatening to leave and never see elder again
- Threatening to divorce or not divorce
- Threatening to commit suicide
- Threatening to institutionalize the adult or place him or her away from home or family
- Abusing or killing pets
- Destroying or taking property
- Displaying or threatening with weapons

Targeting Vulnerabilities

- Taking or moving a walker, wheelchair, glasses, dentures
- Taking advantage of confusion
- Making the adult miss medical appointments

Sexual Abuse

- Committing a sexual crime against the adult (rape, sexual battery, trafficking)
- Making demeaning remarks about intimate body parts
- Unnecessary, painful or rough handling of the genital area during caregiving that is not part of the nursing plan
- Taking advantage of physical or mental illness to engage in sex
- Forcing sex acts that make victim feel uncomfortable and/or against victim’s wishes
- Forcing victim to watch pornography on television and/or computer
- Voyeurism
- Taking sexually explicit photographs
- Forcing the adult to undress and be viewed by others

Power and Control Wheel

Each section of the wheel describes tactics used by perpetrators of elder abuse. Any combination of tactics may be used to control and manipulate the victim.

Identifying Elder Abuse

Section 2

Elder abuse can be difficult to identify. There are many indicators that, taken in isolation, may not appear suspicious. However, when coupled with other behaviors or activities, they may suggest that an adult needs help. Many reports of elder abuse involve more than one type of maltreatment. For example, it may be easier to financially exploit an older adult who also is experiencing some other form of abuse or neglect and is afraid of or dependent on the perpetrator. In addition, self-neglect can be the result of financial loss due to exploitation.

There are two types of indicators of possible maltreatment: behavioral and physical. Physical indicators may be identified by the adult's condition, injuries and, in some cases, the condition of the adult's living environment. While behaviors also are observable, they require interpretation. One must pay attention to nonverbal cues or have some understanding of what is considered "normal" behavior for the person to identify whether there have been behavior changes. For example, an adult who was once very social and outgoing may, for no apparent physical or cognitive reason, suddenly stop attending activities that he or she had enjoyed and been involved in for years.

Indicators of Elder Abuse and Potential Criminal Charges

The following behaviors could be indicators of maltreatment:

- Being isolated; contacts with others are limited, "monitored" or completely cut off
- Missing appointments
- Appearing frightened or afraid; avoiding specific people
- Being subjected to chemical restraint (use of medications to control activity or awareness)

- Suddenly withdrawing from usual activities or interactions with friends and family
- Changes in mood or temperament
- Changes in personal hygiene
- Regressive behaviors (such as soiling without a medical cause or ambulatory issues)
- Substance use or abuse
- Trying to flee the home or facility
- Sleep disturbances
- Being resistant to touching, bathing or specific types of caregiving (such as changing clothing)
- Hyper-vigilance
- Coded disclosures, such as: "He's my boyfriend," "She loves me" or "I'm his favorite girl/her special guy"

The following are possible indicators of specific types of maltreatment:

Possible Indicators of Self-Neglect

- Dehydration, malnutrition, untreated or improperly attended medical conditions, and poor personal hygiene
- Hazardous or unsafe living conditions/arrangements (such as improper wiring, no indoor plumbing, no heat, no running water)
- Unsanitary or unclean living quarters (such as animal/insect infestation, no functioning toilet, fecal/urine smell)
- Inappropriate and/or inadequate clothing, lack of the necessary medical aids (such as eyeglasses, hearing aids, dentures)
- Grossly inadequate housing or homelessness
- Hoarding (trash, animals)

Possible Indicators of Neglect

- Dehydration, malnutrition, untreated bed sores and poor personal hygiene
- Unattended or untreated health problems
- An elder's report of being mistreated
- The desertion of an elder at a hospital, a nursing facility or other similar institution
- The desertion of an elder at a shopping center or other public location
- An elder's own report of being abandoned

Possible Indicators of Financial Exploitation

- Sudden changes in a bank account or banking practice, including an unexplained withdrawal of large sums of money by a person accompanying the elder
- The inclusion of additional names on an elder's bank signature card
- Unauthorized withdrawal of the elder's funds using the elder's ATM card
- Abrupt changes in a will or other financial documents
- Unexplained disappearance of funds
- Missing personal property or valuable possessions
- Substandard care being provided or bills unpaid despite the availability of adequate financial resources
- Discovery of an elder's signature being forged for financial transactions or for the titles of his/her possessions
- Sudden appearance of previously uninvolved relatives claiming their rights to an elder's affairs and possessions
- Unexplained sudden transfer of assets to a family member or someone outside the family
- Missing or redirected mail
- The provision of services that are not necessary
- An elder's report of financial exploitation

Possible Indicators of Emotional Abuse

- Being emotionally upset or agitated
- Deference in the presence of the suspected perpetrator
- Depression
- Eating and sleep disturbances
- Declining functional capacity
- Being extremely withdrawn and noncommunicative or nonresponsive
- Unusual behavior usually attributed to dementia (such as sucking, biting, rocking)
- Poor work or volunteer performance (change from the norm)
- Inability to make decisions with no known physical or medical explanation, questioning own capabilities
- An elder's report of being verbally or emotionally mistreated

Possible Indicators of Physical Abuse

- Bruises, black eyes, welts, lacerations, burns or rope marks
- Bone fractures, broken bones or skull fractures
- Open wounds, cuts, punctures, untreated injuries in various stages of healing
- Sprains, dislocations or internal injuries/bleeding
- Broken eyeglasses/frames, physical signs of being subjected to punishment, and signs of being restrained
- Laboratory findings of medication overdose or underutilization of prescribed drugs
- An elder's report of being hit, slapped, kicked or mistreated
- Sudden changes in the elder's behavior
- The caregiver's refusal to allow visitors to see an elder alone

Possible Indicators of Sexual Abuse

- Bruises around the breasts or genital area, including pelvis, abdomen and inner thighs
- Unexplained venereal disease or genital infections
- Unexplained vaginal or anal bleeding
- Torn, stained, or bloody underclothing
- An elder’s report of being sexually assaulted or raped
- Unexplained sexually transmitted diseases

Signs of violent behavior in the home (such as smashed furniture or holes in the walls) or the presence of weapons or other items that match a pattern of injury on the adult could be a sign that the adult is in danger or is being abused. If an elder is being cared for by another person and is living in hazardous or unclean living conditions, that could mean the caregiver is neglecting the adult by failing to provide a clean, safe living environment.

Because there could be many reasons for these behaviors or injuries, it is the responsibility of APS staff to assess them within the context of the older adult’s physical condition, medical issues, normal behaviors and environment.

The one indicator that cannot be attributed to another cause is a disclosure of maltreatment – in other words, if the older adult reports being hit, forced to do certain things, demeaned or humiliated, or denied medications, food, clothing or water. In some cases of sexual abuse or financial exploitation, victims may not perceive the maltreatment as such because they are in a romantic relationship with the abuser or believe themselves to be.

A Focus on Financial Exploitation

Although financial exploitation often co-occurs with other forms of elder abuse, its increasing prevalence and impact warrants special attention. Perpetrators of elder financial exploitation may be known to, and even trusted by, the older adult, or they could be strangers. In instances of “pure” financial exploitation – when there is no co-occurrence with other types of elder abuse – the perpetrator is usually not a relative or financially dependent on the elder, and the adult is physically healthy. “Hybrid” financial exploitation usually involves relatives who are financially dependent on the older adult, who in turn is physically dependent on the perpetrator.

The pure form of financial exploitation most often involves defrauding the older adult, is of shorter duration, and results in less financial loss. Hybrid financial exploitation typically involves theft from the older adult over a longer period with co-occurring abuse and/or neglect.

The National Center on Elder Abuse (2014) developed the following chart outlining the types of financial exploitation frequently associated with the different perpetrator/elder relationships.

Forms of Financial Exploitation by Type of Perpetrator

Family members, friends, in-home caregivers, legal guardians, representative payees, etc.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Theft of cash or other valuables • Withdrawals from bank accounts or use of credit cards • Transfer of deeds • Misuse of an older adult’s power of attorney • Misappropriation of an incapacitated older adult’s income or assets • Identity theft
Financial services providers (brokers, financial advisors, insurance agents, or others in the financial services industry)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Sale of fraudulent investments (Ponzi or pyramid schemes) • Sale of financial products or services unsuitable for an older adult’s circumstances, such as long-term annuities
Strangers	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Lottery, mail, telephone or internet scams • Door-to-door home repair scams • Identity theft

In addition to the indicators listed previously, there are other signs that an older adult may be a victim of financial exploitation, including:

- A person accompanying an elder shows excessive interest in the elder's finances or accounts, does not allow elder to speak, or is reluctant to leave the elder's side during conversations.
- The elder shows an unusual degree of fear, anxiety, submissiveness or deference toward the person accompanying him or her.
- Repeated attempts to contact the elder and speak directly with him or her are unsuccessful.
- The elder displays unexplained or unusual excitement over a financial windfall or prize check; may be reluctant to discuss details.
- Sudden non-sufficient funds activity appears on the elder's accounts.
- A new recipient's address appears on the elder's accounts, especially when the new address is distant from the elder's home.
- Large withdrawals are made from a previously inactive account, a new joint account is opened, or balances suddenly appear on the elder's credit cards.
- The elder's investments are abruptly liquidated (such as bank CDs, mutual funds, annuities).
- Checks are made out to strangers from the elder's bank account, and someone other than the elder has them cashed or deposited into their own accounts.

It is not always the case that a victim of exploitation lacks the ability to understand potential consequences. Older adults may be more vulnerable to the manipulation and deception of an exploiter due to grief or isolation. Perpetrators in a position of trust engage in a pattern of behaviors over time to convince the older adult to make decisions contrary to his or her own interests. Older adults may not want to admit that they were tricked or manipulated by a stranger or service provider. If the perpetrator is a family member or close friend, they may be hesitant to report the criminal behavior of a loved one. This contributes to the widespread belief that financial exploitation of the older adults is underreported. The annual cost of financial elder abuse is believed to be in the billions, with estimates ranging from $3 billion to more than $36 billion.

A Community Response to Elder Abuse: Mandated Reporters

Section 3

Legal Responsibilities for Reporting Elder Abuse

Ohio Revised Code (ORC) Section 5101.63 identifies the individuals mandated to report known or suspected elder abuse in Ohio and requires reports to be made to the county departments of job and family services. Ohio law does not allow exceptions for professional relationships, such as doctor/patient or attorney/client. The statutory penalties for failing to report known or suspected elder abuse, neglect or exploitation are outlined in ORC Section 5101.99 and apply to all the mandatory reporters listed in ORC 5101.63.

In addition to the list of professionals and service providers mandated to report suspected abuse, neglect and exploitation, the statute states that any person who has “reasonable cause to believe that an adult has suffered abuse, neglect or exploitation may report, or cause a report to be made of such belief to the county department of job and family services.” Each county JFS agency is statutorily mandated to investigate reports of elder abuse, neglect or exploitation. The law allows the JFS agencies to contract with “designees” to fulfill their APS responsibilities.

Confidentiality

A report of elder abuse made to a CDJFS or its designated agency and the investigatory report are confidential and not a public record. Pursuant to Ohio law and rules, the information contained in the report must be provided to the adult subject of the report and his or her legal counsel upon request. However, the name and other identifying information about the reporter or any other person providing information during an investigation is redacted prior to release of this information.

Ohio Administrative Code Rule 5101:2-20-05 outlines the entities that may receive the unredacted investigatory reports and the circumstances under which the name of the reporter or any person providing information during an investigation may be released:

- Ohio Department of Job and Family Services staff with supervisory responsibility in the administration of Ohio's APS program
- Law enforcement when investigating a criminal case
- The county prosecutor when information is needed for criminal proceedings
- Another CDJFS or its designee assessing or investigating an adult abuse, neglect or exploitation report involving a principal of the case

Immunity from Civil or Criminal Liability

Ohio law protects any person who makes a report of elder abuse, or who testifies in an administrative or judicial proceeding arising from such a report, from civil or criminal liability. This immunity, spelled out in ORC 5101.63, does not apply to perjury during testimony or for situations in which the person has acted in bad faith or with malicious intent.

Ohio law also prohibits employers, or any other person with the authority to do so, from taking any action against employees who report suspected elder abuse. Specifically, employers may not take action detrimental to the employee or retaliate in any way against the employee by firing, demoting, transferring or preparing a negative employee performance evaluation. Reducing benefits, pay or work privileges also is prohibited under the law.

Adult Protective Services

Unlike children, adults have the right to choose to live in an unsafe, unhealthy or abusive situation. Finding the balance between the older adult's safety and his or her right to self-determination is a difficult and sometimes frustrating challenge.

The presence of one or more indicators of elder maltreatment does not necessarily mean that an individual is being abused or is at risk of harm from self or others. It is the responsibility of APS staff to find appropriate interventions to ensure the protection of the older adult while honoring the person's right to live life how – and with whom – he or she chooses.

When a county APS program receives a referral, the agency will determine whether the information meets the criteria to be "screened in," or accepted for investigation. In some cases, there are other community resources or services available that are better able to meet the older adult's needs or address the identified concerns. The APS agency may make a referral to another community agency without conducting an investigation when that is a more appropriate response to the situation. Ohio Administrative Code (OAC) rules govern the activities that must be completed during an APS investigation. OAC Rules 5101:2-20-11 and 5101:2-20-12 outline the requirements for screening and investigating reports of elder abuse.

If the reported concerns indicate an immediate threat of physical or financial harm to the older adult, the report is classified as an emergency, and APS staff have 24 hours to initiate the investigation. If the report is determined not to be an emergency, APS staff must initiate the investigation within three working days of receiving the report. Each county is required to have a system in place to receive APS referrals 24 hours a day, seven days a week, including weekends and holidays.

Once an investigation has begun, APS staff have 30 days to complete it and evaluate the need for protective services. The APS worker must attempt to see the older adult face-to-face and provide him or her with a written notice of the intent to investigate. The worker also is required to explain the notice to the adult in a manner that the adult is able to understand. A translator or interpreter must be provided if necessary. The worker has the option of requesting an additional 15 days to complete the investigation if information such as a medical report is needed to make a determination. The finding for a completed APS investigation is either "Validated" or "Not Validated."

The adult subject of an APS report has the right to refuse the investigation. When the adult agrees to the investigation, the worker is required to assess risk, interview other known persons or agencies that have knowledge of the alleged maltreatment and investigate any additional concerns that are discovered during the investigation. If the adult does not appear to understand the consequences of the decisions being made, or does not understand that he or she is at risk of injury or harm, the APS worker can file a petition with the local probate court for orders to provide protective services or assist with completing the investigation. The court must find the adult to be incapacitated before issuing orders that override the adult's wishes. See Section 4 of this guide for more information about court interventions in adult protective services.

Services can be provided to an older adult if they are available and if the adult is open to receiving services. If an ongoing services case is opened by APS, the agency will develop a case plan with the adult and make face-to-face contact with the adult at least monthly to monitor progress on the case plan objectives. Every 90 days, the agency will review the case plan to determine if the services should be continued, modified or terminated. If the adult is deemed incapacitated or incompetent and unable to agree to services, the agency may petition the court to order the provision of services.

Interdisciplinary Teams (I-Teams)

An I-Team is a group of community professionals from a variety of social service disciplines who meet regularly to discuss specific cases of elder abuse, neglect or exploitation and jointly address concerns. The members' diverse backgrounds, experience, training and philosophies allow the issues presented to be examined from multiple perspectives. The I-Team framework encourages multidisciplinary collaboration, access to services and shared responsibility.

I-Teams were mandated in Ohio Revised Code section 5101.621 in 2015. The purpose of the I-Teams is the coordination of efforts related to the prevention, reporting and treatment of abuse, neglect and exploitation of adults. Some county teams were in existence long before the statutory requirement, and counties have discretion regarding team membership and structure. It is recommended that counties invite all local senior service providers to participate in I-Team meetings.

There are two types of I-Teams: case specific and coordinated community response. Case-specific I-Team members present current cases at regular meetings, generally with requests for guidance or suggestions. Coordinated community response I-Teams identify and develop community resources, protocols and procedures that can help increase and improve APS services. Some I-Teams operate as a combination of the two types. Information about local I-Team membership and activities can be obtained from the county department of job and family services.

The Ohio Human Services Training System

The Ohio Human Services Training System (OHSTS) provides in-service training for APS workers and their public and private community partners. The program is operated by the Ohio Department of Job and Family Services, through a contract with the Institute for Human Services. A statewide steering committee provides program oversight and governance of the developmental and operational activities necessary for OHSTS to achieve its mission to “Strengthen best practice in adult protective services through comprehensive skill development, collaboration, and advocacy.”

OHSTS utilizes a comprehensive skills-based and culturally competent learning approach. Both in-person and online training options are available.

Four Regional Training Centers (RTCs) – in Clermont, Franklin, Guernsey and Lucas counties – coordinate training events for county APS agencies based on identified learning needs. See the map below for the OHSTS regions and the contact information.

In-person training is free of charge to all participants, and workshops are approved for continuing education credits through the Ohio Counselor, Social Worker and Marriage and Family Therapist Board. There is a fee for program partners and stakeholders to participate in the online training. To download the training catalog or register for training, visit ohsts.org. Program partners and stakeholders may register for in-person training workshops by clicking on the “For Trainees” link and using the Guest Registration form. Contact the appropriate regional coordinator for information on registering for online training.

Court Interventions and Third-Party Decision Makers

Section 4

Competent adults have the right to make decisions for themselves, even if their decisions present a risk to them. Older adults who understand the potential consequences of their actions have the right to authorize someone else to make decisions on their behalf. However, when the behavior of an older, vulnerable adult suggests that his or her judgment may be impaired to the degree that the elder does not recognize the potential consequences of the decisions, it is possible to take action that gives another individual or entity the legal authority to make decisions regarding the elder's care or finances.

When working with an elder who does not appear to understand the decisions being made, it may be necessary to obtain orders from the court to assess the elder's situation and/or provide services. In other circumstances, it may be necessary to appoint another person or entity to make decisions on the elder's behalf.

Protective Orders

In some circumstances, the APS agency can obtain court orders to gain access to an older adult when a caregiver refuses to allow APS to see the adult. The APS agency also may be able to obtain court orders to provide services to an adult who refuses services and is a risk to himself or others. There are several options for court intervention. The type of petition filed and the orders requested depend on the urgency of the situation, whether the adult is incapacitated, and what the APS agency is trying to accomplish—for example, provision of services or removal of a perpetrator from the home.

Under APS law, an incapacitated person means "...a person who is impaired for any reason to the extent that the person lacks sufficient understanding or capacity to make and carry out reasonable decisions concerning the person's self or resources, with or without the assistance of a caretaker. Refusal to consent to the provision of services shall not be the sole determinative that the person is incapacitated."

To issue an ex parte order, the court must find that the adult is incapacitated, that an emergency exists, and that there is reason to believe there is substantial risk of immediate and irreparable physical or financial harm to the adult. To issue an emergency protective services order, the court must find all of the above and that there is no person authorized by law or the court to give consent for the adult. Beginning on September 29, 2018, revisions to the Ohio Revised Code will allow county prosecutors to file a petition for the provision of protective services in cases of financial exploitation.

Guardianship

By statute, a guardian is "... any person, association, or corporation appointed by the probate court to have the care and management of the person, the estate, or both of an incompetent or minor." Use of a guardianship is not limited to older adults. However, an adult must be determined incompetent for the court to appoint a guardian. For the purpose of guardianship, Ohio Revised Code defines an incompetent person as someone who meets either of the following criteria:

- Any person who is so mentally impaired, as a result of a mental or physical illness or disability, as a result of intellectual disability, or as a result of chronic substance abuse, that the person is incapable of taking proper care of the person’s self or property or fails to provide for the person’s family or other persons for whom the person is charged by law to provide;

- Any person confined to a correctional institution within this state.

The guardian of an older adult is the person legally responsible for making health and/ or economic decisions on behalf of the older adult. Guardianship is a part-legal, part-social relationship. A guardianship is established through a legal proceeding, and the duties are carried out in a social service context. The reason an older adult may have a guardian is dependent on the adult’s specific circumstances. However, appointment of a guardian is always the result of the person having a physical or mental condition that impairs his or her decision-making ability.

There are different types of guardianship. Each has a different scope of authority and level of responsibility:

- Guardian of the Person
- Guardian of the Estate
- Full Guardian of Person and Estate
- Interim Guardian
- Emergency Guardian
- Limited Guardian

A Guardian of the Person has the authority to make decisions about daily living, medical care and treatment, and residential decisions, including placement and selection of providers for day-to-day care. A Guardian of the Person does not have authority to make decisions involving assets or finances and must work in conjunction with a Guardian of the Estate.

A Guardian of the Estate is responsible for preserving the adult's income and assets and managing any lawsuits or litigation. This person has the authority to expend funds on behalf of the adult and must work in conjunction with the Guardian of the Person.

A Full Guardian of Person and Estate has all the responsibilities and authority listed above for Guardian of the Person and Guardian of the Estate.

An Interim Guardian is appointed to replace a former guardian on a temporary basis. The initial appointment can be for 15 days with the possibility of a 30-day extension. This type of guardianship can be established without the adult's presence (ex parte).

A true emergency must exist for an Emergency Guardian to be appointed. This type of appointment also can be made ex parte and is done to prevent imminent harm to the person or estate. An Emergency Guardian is appointed initially for 72 hours, although it can be extended for up to 30 days. Local courts may have specific procedures for appointing an Emergency Guardian.

A Limited Guardian is a Guardian of the Person or a Guardian of the Estate who is appointed to address a specific time, problem or need. The court has broad discretion to impose limitations on the scope of authority and level of responsibility a Limited Guardian has with respect to decision-making for the adult.

The probate court judge who made the appointment is responsible for monitoring the guardianship. Although guardianship applications are governed by ORC 2111.01–2111.51 and the Rules of Superintendence for the Courts of Ohio (Sup. R. 66.01-66.09), each county probate court can require specific forms and procedures for individuals in that county.

Although guardianship is often the first thing people think of when an elder appears unable to make sound decisions, there are several less restrictive alternatives. These options must be explored prior to establishing a guardianship.

Power of Attorney

Power of Attorney (POA) is a directive authorized by statute (ORC Chapter 1337) that often is specific to finances or health care. It allows an individual (the principal) to name a third party as his/her agent with the authority to make decisions regarding matters that the principal is unable to make. The principal must have decision-making capacity – in other words, the cognitive functioning to understand the effects of his or her decisions and acts. The POA must be “durable” for it to be effective as an alternative to guardianship. This means the principal specifically intends for the agent to have authority to act on the principal's behalf after he or she becomes incapacitated or incompetent.

The scope of power delegated to the agent can be as broad or as narrow as the principal wishes. POAs should be presented to court for consideration as an alternative to guardianship and must be carefully read and reviewed. Pursuant to ORC 2111.04, all authority granted to an agent through a POA is suspended immediately upon the agent being served with a Notice of a Guardianship Hearing. The principal has the right to nominate the person he or she would like to serve as a guardian within the POA, and the court will consider the principal's nomination. However, the probate court ultimately makes the final decision regarding who is appointed.

Conservatorship, Advance Directive and Authorized Representative

Conservatorships also are authorized by statute (ORC 2111.021) and are used when an individual is mentally competent but physically infirm. The probate court will appoint someone to assist the individual and carry out day-to-day tasks without requiring the individual to surrender all decision-making authority. A conservatorship is a voluntary trust relationship using certain guardianship laws and procedures subject to court supervision.

Advance Directives, such as living wills, state the adult's wishes regarding medical treatment at the end of life, in the event the adult is unable to communicate those wishes to a doctor. This is different from a POA in that the adult makes their own decisions regarding restorative health care instead of the person holding the POA.

A Payee or Authorized Representative is an individual with permission to receive and expend Social Security benefits, Supplemental Social Security Income (SSI) or veterans' benefits on behalf of a recipient. A payee or authorized representative can be appointed based on a court finding of mental incompetence or on the submission of evidence to the Social Security or Veterans administrations demonstrating the mental or physical incapacity of the recipient that impairs management of the funds. A Guardian of the Estate should never be appointed for the sole purpose of managing Social Security, SSI or veterans' benefits.

Consent and Undue Influence

As noted in the APS Desk Guide for Law Enforcement (Stiegel, 2015):

The legal concepts of consent, decision-making capacity, or undue influence—or some combination of them—are a critical issue in many cases of elder abuse. ...

Lack of consent is an element of many crimes, such as sexual assault or theft.

Adults may be unable to give valid consent because they do not have decision-making capacity or because they are victims of undue influence.

As a psychological concept, undue influence has been defined as "when people use their role and power to exploit the trust, dependency and fear of others. They use this power to deceptively gain control over the decision-making of the second person." If an older adult lacks the ability to understand the consequences of his or her decisions, he or she is unable to give legal consent. Diminished decision-making capacity makes an elder more vulnerable to undue influence, such as coercion, fraud, intimidation, misrepresentation and threats.

Reporting Suspected Elder Abuse

Section 5

How to Make a Report of Elder Abuse

Reports of elder abuse should be made to the CDJFS, or its designated APS agency, in the county where the adult resides. The APS agency is required to have someone available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, including holidays, to take referrals of known or suspected elder abuse. Some counties work with local law enforcement or other agencies to take calls after normal business hours. Contact information for all Ohio APS agencies is included in this section.

Ohio also has a statewide, toll-free number for reporting elder abuse: 1-855-OHIO-APS (855-644-6277). The referral line instructs callers to enter the first four letters of the adult's county of residence. The system is available 24/7 and transfers calls to the appropriate county APS agency's business or after-hours contact number, depending on the day and time of the call. When in doubt about the elder's county of residence, the reporter may contact his or her own county of residence (if in Ohio), and the report will be referred to the appropriate county. Reports can be made by phone, in writing or in person.

Mandated reporters are not responsible for determining whether elder abuse is occurring. If there is reason to suspect that an adult is being abused or is at risk of harm, those suspicions should be reported to APS immediately. There is no penalty for reporting allegations that are found to be non-validated provided the report was made in good faith. Waiting to report suspicions could, however, subject the older adult to continued harm during the delay. It is important to provide all known information related to the older adult's condition and the alleged maltreatment. If more information is obtained after making a report, do not hesitate to contact APS again to provide the new information. The APS screener will try to obtain the following information, at a minimum:

- The name(s) and address(es) of the adult and the adult's caregiver or guardian
- The names of all household members
- The adult's age
- The adult's race and ethnicity
- Circumstances regarding the abuse, neglect and/or exploitation (be specific and provide as much detail as possible)
- Alleged perpetrator's access to the adult, if applicable
- The adult's current condition
- The adult's current location
- Information regarding any evidence of previous abuse, neglect and/or exploitation
- Any other information that might be helpful in establishing the cause of the known or suspected abuse, neglect and/or exploitation

Having all the information listed above is not required to make a report. Simply provide any known information that may assist in the referral and investigation process.

Reports can be made anonymously. However, it is helpful for APS to have the reporter's contact information in case the investigators have follow-up questions. Sometimes mandated reporters provide their identity to ensure there is a verifiable record of them making the report. If the reporter asks, the agency may inform him or her of the screening decision (whether the referral was accepted for investigation).

Where to Make a Report of Elder Abuse

Several entities in Ohio have legal authority and responsibility for investigating maltreatment reports involving vulnerable older adults. Which entity investigates the report depends on where the elder resides (for example, in the community or in a facility) and how the perpetrator has access to the elder (for example, as a family member or as a staff member of a licensed facility).

For an elder residing in his or her own home or another independent living arrangement in the community, the report should be made to the APS agency in the county where the elder resides. If it is unclear which entity has the authority and responsibility to investigate allegations of elder abuse, contact the county APS agency. Ohio statute and Ohio Administrative Code rule 5101:2-20-14 require APS to forward the referral to the agency with investigatory jurisdiction, when applicable.

Allegations of abuse, neglect or theft involving an individual with a developmental disability may be reported to the county board of developmental disabilities, as this is usually the quickest and easiest way to log a complaint. Concerns also may be referred to the Ohio Department of Developmental Disabilities' Abuse/Neglect Hotline (866-313-6733), 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

When an elder resides in a licensed health care facility and the perpetrator is a resident or staff member of the facility, a report may be made by calling the Ohio Department of Health's hotline number (800-342-0553) or completing the online complaint form at <http://www.odh.ohio.gov/-/media/ODH/ASSETS/Files/ltc/nursing-homes---facilities/Complaint-Form.pdf?la=en>.

The Ohio Department of Mental Health and Addiction Services (Ohio MHAS) licenses facilities serving individuals with mental illness. APS investigates reports of elder abuse in Ohio MHAS facilities that provide residential care for three to 16 unrelated adults. Concerns of maltreatment in other Ohio MHAS facilities are investigated by the department's Bureau of Licensure and Certification. To report a concern, call 877-275-6364 or 614-644-8317.

The State Long-Term Care Ombudsman advocates for the rights of people receiving care in their own homes or in assisted living or long-term care facilities. When the elder resides in a licensed or certified facility, and the alleged perpetrator resides in the community (and is not an employee of the facility), the state or regional ombudsman may partner with the local APS agency to jointly investigate allegations of abuse, neglect or exploitation.

Staff from the Ohio Attorney General's Elder Abuse Initiative work with law enforcement, prosecutors, communities and APS to enhance elder abuse victims' access to criminal justice services. The Attorney General's Office investigates consumer complaints, including allegations of patient abuse and neglect in long-term care settings, and provides information to raise awareness about elder abuse and assist older adults in identifying and avoiding scams.
